U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Hagan, W. A. (D.V.M.) INFECTIOUS DISEASES OF DOMESTIC ANIMALS, WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO ETIOLOGY, DIAGNOSIS, AND BIOLOGIC THERAPY. Comstock pub.co. 1943. 665p., illus. 41 H1231

The broad subject with which this book deals is presented in a manner which pleasantly invites reading and observation of its contents. All infectious diseases are discussed with a clearness which appeals to the reader; and, considering the magnitude of the field which is covered, an admirable approach to brevity of discussion where practicable is judiciously made. As a text book it should serve with equal high rank to that which it will certainly attain as a source of information for veterinarians, whether they be engaged in general practice, or in public service as livestock sanitary officials. In sum, it is difficult to see how the advent of this book by Dr. Hagan can be commented on other than favorably.

Walter C. Dendinger, Inspector in Charge, Bureau of Animal Industry, Atlanta, Georgia.
